

Country Caps for Emerging Markets Strategies

Dimensional's emerging markets strategies may impose a limit on exposure to any individual market at the time of purchase. Our investment team regularly reviews this limit as the emerging markets landscape changes. Drivers of a change may include countries being added or removed from the eligible country universe, changes in the size and structure of particular markets, or changes in regulation or market openness.

In October 2016, we adjusted the internal limit from approximately 15% to approximately 17.5%. This adjustment is a reflection of changes in the size and structure of emerging markets over the past several years.

RISKS

Investments involve risks. The investment return and principal value of an investment may fluctuate so that an investor's shares, when redeemed, may be worth more or less than their original value. Past performance is not a guarantee of future results. There is no guarantee strategies will be successful.

International investing involves special risks such as currency fluctuation and political instability. Investing in emerging markets may accentuate these risks. Sector-specific investments can also increase investment risks.
